Tuesday	Respecting ourselves	Welcome & Game (5 mins): Play "Mirror, Mirror." Have kids copy positive, gentle actions (like hugging themselves or giving a thumbs-up) to show that what we see in the mirror is valuable. The Big Idea (10 mins): Talk about how respect does not just mean being nice to others. It starts with treating ourselves with kindness because God loves us. God gave us our bodies to care for, our minds to learn with, and our voices to speak truth. Matthew 7:12 says "Treat others as you would want them to treat you." Respect is about being honest and trustworthy. It is about looking after belongings, equipment, the school and our environment. You gain respect by giving respect. Self-respect is where it starts. When children learn to value themselves, they begin to not only understand how they should be treated but also how they should treat others. For children, self-respect can be seen as: • Speaking to themselves with kindness and encouragement • Taking care of their physical, emotional and mental well-being • Recognizing their own worth and abilities • Feeling confident in expressing their needs and opinions • Walking away from situations that feel hurtful or disrespectful This begins with the environment around them. Ensuring children feel accepted, supported and safe can help them build a positive sense of self. Trusted adults play an important role here by modelling self-respect through their own words and actions and by framing mistakes as opportunities to learn rather than failures. Children who develop self-respect are better equipped to set boundaries, gain confidence and extend the same understanding to others
